

世界主要權威人權調查機構對臺灣人權調查結果之比較

黃國敏

行政管理學系

人文社會學院

edhwang@chu.edu.tw

摘要

Human rights are universal values of human civilization and total assets, no country or individual can be excluded, and there is no double standard. To understand the current status of human rights development in Taiwan, this paper intends to compare the human rights performance by five widely recognized human rights institutions in recent years. According to the comparison of the survey results, the 12 strategies for the development of human rights in Taiwan are provided as the following: first, the Anti-corruption Bureau, Investigation Bureau, and National Police Agency should more proactively inspect the bribery; second, the government should more actively explore the hardships and sufferings, and respond to the needs of the people; third, to establish the Anti-corruption Bureau in this wave of reinventing government movement; fourth, to enhance the Fire-fighter Bureau to the Disaster Prevention and Protection Commission; fifth, to abolish the death penalty; sixth, to amend the Group and Rallies Law; seventh, the decriminaliation of sex workers; eighth, to legalize the Refugee Act, refugees should also be applicable to Chinese; ninth, pay attention to the human rights of women; tenth, to seriously inspect the foreign labor trafficking and abuse; eleventh, strengthen to protect the civil liberties, such as assembly, freedom of association, freedom of entry and exit, freedom of speech; finally, continue to promote the independence of the judiciary.

關鍵字：Human Rights, Taiwan, Human Rights Investigation