摘要

Three Taiwan scholars, Tseng Chien-Yuan, Chu Cheng-Chi and Julie Couderc, were invited by the Tibet Policy Institute of the Central Tibetan Administration to visit the Tibetan exile community in Dharamshala, India in the fall of 2012. These invitees visited important local constructions of the Tibetans-in-exile, paid formal visits to all the important non-governmental organizations, attended conference held in College of Higher Tibetan Studies at Sarah, talked with officers of the Tibet Policy Institute, and had dinner with the Minister of Foreign Affairs and News Kalon Dicki Chhoyang. In addition, the invitees co-organized the Taiwan film Seediq Bale: Rainbow Bridge' s screenings with local elites. This article, describing the daily local experiences and thinkings, would reflect the life, ideas and feelings of the Tibetans-in-exile and to pay homage to the 14th Dalai Lama and the Tibetans-in-exile for their insistence and pursuit of the national dignity, religious and cultural traditions, as well as the democracy in the Tibetan exile community.
